✓ LEARNING CURVE

A go-big statement necklace like this one (with matching earrings) is easy to DIY. Arrange etched pendants—these crescents come in three sizes—into a trendy tapered design, and join them all with jump rings. Add-on bead dangles are a whimsical plus.

⤴ MOVED TO TIERS

Cascading tiers of mismatched beads give this necklace a decidedly free-spirit feel. Start with one intact beaded strand. Then remove part of the chain from additional strands, and join them all by hooking each strand to the end of the one above it.

⤴ NEED FOR BEADS

Slide every-color beads and dangles (the dangles come pre-strung on one of our necklaces) onto earring hoops, and say bye-bye to complicated jewelry projects. Just detach beads and strands, string 'em onto hoops, and let your bead beauty shine.

^ CHAIN EVENT

An exotic, dangly pendant makes tribal style look effortless. But the thing that makes it authentic? A beaded mix-and-match chain. Trade segments of a gold chain for wood and glass beads (strung onto eye pins), and you've got a best-of-boho creation.

^ SEEING TRIPLE

Great things come in threes... and that's why we tripled the curb appeal on this stylish brass beauty. Join a few of your favorite made-you-look pendants, and hook them onto a chunky chain—double lobster clasps make it extra easy to swap out pieces.

^ DANGLES AWAY ^

Here's lookin' at you, jewelry newbies! Start your journey into style-savvy accessories with no-fuss projects like these—our daring dangle pendants aren't afraid to stand alone. If you're feeling ambitious, try swapping dangles for painted beads.

✎ MORE IS MORE

This piled-on necklace is nothing short of a stampeding herd of adorableness. Attach loads and loads of charms and beads to a sturdy chain for a look that's bigger, better, and a whole lot wilder than your average statement necklace—in the best way.

✎ AWE OF THE JUNGLE

Jungle-chic jewelry? It's all the rage. And these chunky doodads—complete with a rhinestoned, tasseled elephant—bring some seriously tribal flair to a basic beaded necklace. We attached them to the necklace with a trio of thick, gold rings.

CHARMED, I'M SURE

If you're looking to DIY your way to trendy handmade accessories in a craft afternoon or two, here's one surefire way to get started—and it all starts with charms. Pick up a mix of trendy trinkets and slide them onto a group of beaded strands or chains.

CLIP, CLIP, HOORAY!

Here's our best trick of the jewelry-making trade: easy-to-use lobster clasps! When you grab a handful of ready-to-go pendants and clasps, any accessory becomes a quick-change artist—clip on a new one whenever you're in need of an easy style swap-up.

BRACE YOURSELF

Bangles galore make a boho gal's heart soar! The key to pulling off this free-spirited look is in the funky mix of colors, textures and sizes.

So grab some ready-to-wear bracelets (we've got wood, fabric and more), and pile on the charms and beads.

WIRE AWAY

Your inner fashion goddess will go gaga for this multi-texture necklace. Grab a handful of these bead-topped wooden pendants, and wrap them with as little or as much wire as you like. Then connect them with jump rings and jewelry wire at the beads.

DARE TO DRAPE

For the dangle-loving diva in all of us, these kitschy-meets-classy chandeliers are a must. They come like you see 'em, minus the earring hooks and extra white bead at the top. Our favorite part? The gold-and-silver combo means no matching woes.

^ AZTEC YOU LIKE IT

Earthy mixed-media beads and Aztec-inspired pendants give your handmade jewelry a healthy dose of grass-roots charm. If you're working with big, loose beads like these, string them onto plastic cord and tie off at the back.

^ CUFF LUCK

All of the drama, none of the fuss—that's what we're going for with this quirky heart cuff. To attach it to the leather, stitch through hole openings at the top and bottom of the pendant with invisible thread... then let the wow factor work its magic.

◀ JEWELS OF THE TRADE

Get ready to climb the ladder of trendiness in this three-tier stunner! Remove a link from the center of a chain, and attach the gem-dotted pendant (comes as-is) with jump rings. For a matching bracelet, connect two pendants (with fringe removed).

⚡ DANGLE DOODLE DANDY

For an easy-breezy statement necklace, try these dancing dangles on for size. Attach the beaded ring (it comes as-is) to a bead-embellished eye pin, and secure the piece to a chain. And for a giftable jewelry set, make a pair of earrings to match.

⚡ BEADING FRENZY

Embellish intricate half-moon pendants with bundles of beads (just stack them on looped-at-one-end headpins) for a look that's at once boho and glamorous. You'll need a chain, fish-hook ear wires, and jump rings for this necklace-and-earrings set.
