« young at art

To give this tray a playful, young-and-in-love vibe, we used tons of embellishments: lace ribbon paper clips, ornate metal frames, antique buckle slides and assorted vintage trinkets. And the awww-inducing quotes? They come from a pack of Artist Trading Cards.

» frame game

This lovey-dovey memory station adds a cut-'n'-crafted twist to your everyday frame. The results? A display-ready tray that guests will ooh and ahh over. It's perfect for an engagement party, shower or reception—especially when paired with coordinating décor like the candle wrap and vintage birdie shown here.

⚙ get your gears

This ornate-shaped tray takes papercrafting to a whole new level. To create a memory spot that's ideal for on-the-go admiration, we used mini-gears and buttons (painted to coordinate), personalized photos, letters and handmade candles. And here's the best part—all the background paper you see comes in a ready-to-craft pack of die cuts. If that doesn't get your wheels turning, we don't know what will!

» happy tray-day

To make the candles (they won't blow out!), we tightly rolled small pieces of paper, securing with adhesive dots. Then we cut out small flame shapes and adhered them to the inside of the candles. For the letters, try some of our alphabet stickers or cut out your own using paper or cardstock.

memory map-out

That first place science project from 4th grade. And the snowstorm adventures from 9th. With our memory trays, you've got heart-warming moments all in one place—so you can track the journey.
