courting cottontails

Two bunnies under a classic cloche jar? They must be in love! These cuties are holding court on a foam round, covered with moss and dotted with handmade paper flowers. We made the muslin banner—it features hand-embroidered lettering, a painted wooden heart and a paper rose.

good egg

It's okay to put all your eggs in one cloche—don't worry, we asked. First, make them bunny-worthy with acrylic paint and crackle medium. This springy display also features willow branches that were soaked in water to make them flexible enough to fit in the jar.

« constitutional cloche The details are the hero of this all-American display, starting with the hand painted base. Use painter's tape to keep your stripes straight, and use a stencil for the stars. Then add flag-waving accessories. Eagle Medallion: Frame Department, Constitution Replica: Hobby Department.

free spirit

Put your patriotic spirit on parade with a stack of miniature monograms. These resin letters come in black, but we shined them up with silver acrylic paint. Then we adhered them to the pre-embellished base (and to each other) with hot glue. Monograms: Home Accents Department.

what a hoot

You're a fool for fall, and we can't say we blame you. That's why we suggest tucking your favorite signs of the season under the dome. First, make a pedestal with floral foam and natural moss. Then embellish it with autumnal florals like berries, wheat heads and feather picks. And don't forget a fallish focal point—a cast iron owl, perhaps? Owl: Home Accents Department.

under a spell Shivers go chic under this spellbinding cloche. You can pull together a similar display with a handful of well-chosen knickknacks. Fill apothecary jars with beads or glitter, and label them with handmade tags. Then make a set of paper monogrammed pinwheels, and mount them on a ribbon-wrapped dowel. Finally, try rounding things out with a spooky figurine. Apothecary Jars: Craft Department.

This winter wonderland cloche is a great place to display a treasured Christmas collectible. For the snow, use decoupage medium to adhere fine grain Epsom salt to the top of the dome and to the base—you may need several coats for solid coverage. Now, finish the look with basic white cording and a holiday berry spray.

^ fine feathers

No gilded cage for this bright Christmas birdie. He's made his home in a beautiful hand-painted cloche. The dome is embellished with enamel craft paint—we brushed crackle medium onto the design for antique appeal. Tip: To make a perch for your bird, drill a small hole in the wooden cloche base to accommodate a greenery stem.

good as gold

Give your hand-painted cloche base some holiday glow with clear jewelry resin. It dries to a pretty sheen and it protects your paint job from wear and water. When the finish has cured according to the manufacturer's instructions, glue on coordinating Christmas ribbon. Then adhere the finished piece to a stately candleholder for display. Jewelry Resin: Craft Department. Candleholder: Home Accents Department.

see the light Dress up a basic cloche with a string of lights and some off-the-shelf Christmas décor. There's no wrong way to approach this look— just bunch the lights on a cake stand, and glue an ornament to the top of the mound. Now place the cloche over the entire arrangement, and surround it with the greenery and embellishments of your choice.

Mini Lights: Sold year-round in the Card and Party Department.

To make a miniature mountain view, stack squares of floral foam and carve them to the desired shape. Now cover your handiwork with miniature evergreens— we painted them silver and dusted them with glitter. Add some baby's breath for interest, and finish with tiny wildlife (painted to coordinate). Cake Base: Wedding Department, Mirror Candle Plate: Candle Department, Snowflake Stickers: Scrapbooking Department.
