

dotty favors

Polka-dot delights abound with this adorable party favor display. Nestled in a holder made from a tall rectangular paper-maché box, these cute paper cones are perfect for a shower or a birthday party. To make them, cut two identical circles from bright scrapbook paper. Put the circles together to form a cone and punch holes in the sides to accommodate the handles. Add sturdy eyelets, bright cord, cheery ribbon, and spotted buttons to complete this functional, but oh-so-fun project!

decorating with dots

Decorate a simple grapevine wreath with clusters of polka-dot decorations, made from scrapbook paper, ribbon, buttons, eyelets, silk flowers, and alphabet stickers. Then, take your polka-dot passion a little further with a paper-covered shadow box, enhanced with chipboard letters, ribbon, rickrack, and matching polka-dot buttons. Continue your whimsical, but decidedly contemporary theme with a simple scrapbook page.

From a page for a princess, to a crown for a queen! This perfectly polka-dotted headdress is fun for royalty of any age. To make it, cut a simple crown shape from cardstock. Then, cover the cardstock with cheerful, coordinating scrapbook paper (heavy on the polka-dots, of course!) Finally, add quirky detail with pretty ribbon, sparkling gems, and shimmering iridescent glitter.

Precious polka-dots are just the thing for a cluster of joyful projects, from whimsical home décor, to unique gifts, to hip and happy keepsakes.

Make memory-filled wall art for a sweet little tyke. Use cheery polka-dot scrapbook paper to cover the back panel of a simple white shadow box. Then, add treasured trinkets and a few embellishments, like our tiny clothesline—it's hung with sweet, polka-dot bows and paper-covered clothespin embellishments. Finish with a "memories" tag and a cheery nameplate (constructed from cardstock, scrapbook paper, rickrack, brads, and stickers), and you've made a one-of-a-kind decoration with priceless, sentimental appeal.

Blank albums aren't the only books that benefit from polka-dot embellishments. This joyful counting book is a terrific addition to any child's library. Lovingly made from chipboard, cardstock, ribbon, simple binder rings, and polka-dot scrapbook paper, this bright and engaging project also makes a unique baby gift. Let your child help you fill the pages with buttons, stickers, and bold chipboard numbers.

« altered album

Personal polka-dots take another form in this animated album. The book was off-the-shelf and bland before adding oodles of delightful dots. To get this look, cover a basic scrapbook album with sheets of polka-dot paper. Then, add purple polka-dot ribbon and coordinating rickrack for cute detail. The finished project is a great place to preserve childhood memories, and best of all, the altered album is a perfect match for your little one's fun-loving personality.
