⌄ fair weather A sunny day is on the way! This simple rainbow design was an easy freehand application. We made it shine with a sprinkling of iridescent glitter. Tip: Adding glitter to your design? Use only cosmetic-grade glitter that is specifically formulated for use on the skin. Any other glitter is a potential eye hazard and potentially toxic. If you're in doubt, it's safer to do without.

⌃ girl with guitar Simple suits this rock 'n' roll design. Both stars and guitars were painted on with a fine paintbrush. Apply background color first. Then…rock out with simple outlining and fun detail.

HAVE PAINT, WILL PARTY! SPECIFICALLY DESIGNED FOR THE FACE, OUR PAINT KITS ARE NON-TOXIC, EASY TO APPLY AND EASILY REMOVABLE WITH SOAP AND WATER. THAT MEANS THEY'RE PERFECT FOR KIDS!

« grrr-oovy This growly getup gives a little man a reason to grin. For a streaky look that mimics fur, artfully apply the base colors (lightest color first) with a brush. Then, draw on the stripes with a paint crayon.

» hot stuff Bright is right—especially when it comes to this fiery paint job! Apply the background color first, then outline away! Touch up as needed, and you're done! Tip: When going for a gradient look, like the one shown here, it's best to apply the lightest color first…then blend!
⌃ pick a pirate All black…is all that! If you're short on time, try a single-color design. Case in point? This friendly pirate. The look was a cinch to apply. Tip: To make removal faster and easier, we stayed away from the skin directly around the eye.

⌄ tangled web Who says your face is the place for a scribble? We do! This spider webby design was drawn on with our handy face paint crayons. They're highly portable and easy to apply in a pinch. Think "fast and affordable."

dream day Fancy pants? We say "fancy paints!" This fantasy design features shimmery paints—they're part of a sparkly color collection that comes with its own sponge applicator. Use the sponge to apply color to large areas, and use a fine brush to apply the details. And if you're inclined, add a sprinkling of self-adhesive gems (available in the Scrapbooking Department), being sure to keep them away from the eyes.

» oh dear Animal attraction? This look wins by a nose! We used a makeup sponge to apply water-activated paint to the background. The paint (similar to the watercolors you used as a kid) is ideal for light, smooth coverage on large areas of skin. And for the deer and the dots? We used a thicker paint and a high quality brush.

« bring wings This fly by design is all about the eyes. We sponged on the inside color (with a light, water-activated face paint) before outlining and detailing with a brush. We call that "flying right!"
« little bird Oh, she's got a thing for wings! We stuck to brilliant color and a heavy-duty brush for this birdbrained design! The resulting "mask" is more than a feather better than anything you could find in a costume shop. So cute!

« what a doll It didn't take much to turn her into a living doll—just a few painted details. We applied them all with a brush and…voilà! Caution: Take extra care when applying paint to the eye area, especially when working with children.

« puppy love
Put the "wow" in "bow wow" with non-toxic face paint! We used a brush to apply the tail-wagging details. Love the rin-tin-rosy cheeks? We created the subtle blush with water-activated paint and a makeup sponge.

bloom zoom How does her girly garden grow? With leaves and vines and fancy flowers—all in vivid, delicately applied face paint. We worked in layers, building on basic shapes with lots of artistic detail. Tip: Want to get fancy with your face paints? Stock up on professional makeup sponges and high-quality brushes (available in the Art Department).
