

little bug

This ladybug skirt is a basic design. The big, buggy difference? A collection of adorable organza polka-dots! We cut out circles and carefully layered into flower-style stacks. Then, we dotted the stacks with beads and stitched them to the tulle.

head start This ladybug look goes from head to toe! And it starts with coordinating headgear... a handmade tulle flower, layered with organza and stitched to a crocheted headband (available in Wearables Department).

neat as a pin

Get creative with your coordinating accessories. This one is as cute as a bug! The brooch features rolled-up tulle (to act as wings), organza and a sprinkling of black gemstones.

tutu how-to! Keep your favorite little ballerina on her toes with a sweet, handmade tutu! Measure her waist, and hand-stitch a loop of elastic accordingly. Then, fold lengths and lengths of our colorful tulle over the band, loop-knotting to secure. So easy!

What can you make with layers and layers of tulle? A bevy of sweet little tutus... No sewing required!

» cutie cowgirl! She's so hip... in a hot pink tutu and a pair of coordinating cowboy boots! This piece is extra fluffy and extra fun. That's because we doubled up the tulle before knotting it onto a simple elastic band.

onesie whimsy! Here's a one-piece that's oh-so-playful and practical too! It's perfect for a toddler on the go! To make one, measure out lengths of tulle to correspond with the size of the onesie. Layer the tulle, add a gathering stitch, and carefully work into a ruffle. Then, pin to the onesie and machine stitch to secure. We even dotted on a few rhinestones for extra sparkle.

tutu true! Crocheted headbands, available in our Wearables Department, came in handy for this glowing green ensemble. Can you believe there's no sewing required? Simply tie lengths of tulle to the bands. We made a dress-length tutu with a ribbon that ties halter-style around the neck. Then, we used the same method to create a wispy purple overlay that added color and shape.

ballerina bliss! Basic pink is just so precious! This uber girly tutu features pink tulle and organza ribbon, knotted to a circle of sturdy elastic. We even tied on a length of flowery trim to serve as a sash. Care to dance? We thought so!
