

» in black-n-white Do you wish for a wrist that's wrapped up in très chic T-shirt style? Done! This casually chic piece is made of bands of T-shirt fabric, stretched for curl and embellished with a trio of animal-print buttons. Tip: For texture, mix in some fabric from the T-shirt collar.

» Assume and bloom! This fast and easy flower pin features circles of T-shirt fabric that we layered and adhered to stiff felt. We topped it with a simple rosette (strips of T-shirt fabric, folded to create a clean edge and coiled into the shape shown) and added a pin back, available in the Jewelry Department.

Finish off a quirky T-shirt necklace with a ready-to-go bloom (a flower pin, available right here in the Wearables Department). This neckwear is layered and looped with band after band of leftover T-shirt fabric. We stretched the fabric to make it curl before wrapping the bands together.

blush rush

We're thinking...pink! Wide bands of T-shirt fabric were partially slashed—we left a few portions intact—to create this loopy, layered necklace. And we added flair with a flashy sequined bow (available in the Wearables Department), mounted on a handy alligator clip. The result? Simple, girly, and just so chic!

When does a T-shirt go totally girly? When we turn it into a sassy little bracelet—in pink, of course! We top-stitched together squares of T-shirt fabric to create a soft nameplate. Then, we added iron-on letters before cutting slits in the sides, knotting on a coordinating T-shirt loop and wrapping around the wrist.

» gray area Stretch strip after strip of T-shirt fabric (it makes the sides curl) to craft your own quirky neckwear. Mix in chains, beads, buttons and more! And when your layers have the look you want, use more T-shirt strips to wrap them together.

Hair...there...everywhere! Make a trendy hairband from T-shirt scraps. Measure a strip of fabric to comfortably fit your head. Stitch closed—a serger works best. Then, stitch on flower shapes and quirky buttons.

» For a ring that sings, try a little T-shirt. Stretch a strip of T-shirt fabric, causing it to curl. Coil around a ring base (available in the Jewelry Department) and hot glue into place. Then, top with a coordinating button.

»» How to finish the perfect gray day look? Try your hand at a cute T-shirt cuff! Layer strips of T-shirt fabric (we used four), and topstitch them together. Then, add designer-style buttons and a simple snap closure. Done!

hot button These chic little buttons are anything but basic. They take our trendy T-shirt style right over the top! The necklace features strips of T-shirt fabric, stretched to curl and knotted into simple loops. The buttons are secured with tiny strips of scrap T-shirts.
